Mayor of London unveils 'Spirit of London' bus

Icon Exhibitions were commissioned to design and build the exhibition stand for Alexander Dennis at the recent Coach and Bus exhibition held at the NEC.

The Mayor of London, Ken Livingstone, unveiled the bus that replaces the vehicle destroyed in the terrorist attack on 7 July.

The new bus, named "Spirit of London" by its operating company Stagecoach East London and manufacturers Alexander Dennis, is the first of a new generation of British designed and built double deckers.

Ken Livingstone said:

'This new bus is another illustration of London's recovery following the terrible events in July. It is a tribute to those who lost their lives and who were injured and a further recognition that London's transport workers, along with the emergency services, responded to the attacks magnificently. London's spirit has been shown in how the city has stood united and defiant in the face of terrorism.'
